Picking the right roofer is one of those jobs that seems simple until three quotes land on the doormat and none of them look alike. Across Cardiff, from the Victorian terraces of Roath and Canton to the interwar semis of Whitchurch and the larger homes of Cyncoed, roofs vary enormously, and so do the firms offering to work on them. Redland Roofing Cardiff is an independent, family-run business that has served Cardiff and South East Wales for over 30 years, and we think the best way to choose between the roofers Cardiff has to offer is to arrive armed with a few good questions. Start by asking whether the roofer is fully insured and what guarantee comes with the workmanship. A reputable firm will answer both without hesitation and put the terms in writing. Next, ask whether the quote is free and whether it sets out the work clearly so you can see exactly what you are paying for. Transparent pricing with no hidden costs should be the norm, not a bonus. It is also worth asking whether the roofer would repair rather than replace. An honest contractor will not push a full new roof when a targeted repair will do the job, and the answer tells you a great deal about how they work. Ask how the roofer will show you the problem. Many issues sit out of sight, around chimney flashing, valleys or ridge tiles, so photos and videos of the damage and of the before and after stages give you real confidence. Ask too about timescales and weather. A full replacement on a standard Cardiff terrace or semi typically takes two to four days, weather permitting, https://waylonaere171.silverstonebrief.com/posts/roofers-cardiff-family-run-for-over-30-years and the roof should be left watertight at the end of every working day. For homes in conservation areas such as Pontcanna, Llandaff or parts of Roath, ask whether the roofer has experience with Cardiff Council consent where materials change.
