Prepare a yard brief by describing how you want to use the space before choosing individual features. List the routes you need to keep open, the areas you want to enjoy and the existing planting or structures you want considered. Keep the brief short enough to use during a conversation.

Describe the everyday use

Explain who uses the yard and what you would like to do there. Mark the entrance, a seating area you are considering and the places where you want to retain open space. Separate an essential requirement from a preference. Ask the landscape contractor which parts of the brief need more landscape design chicago detail before a proposal can be prepared.

Bring the questions you cannot answer yourself

Use photographs to show the areas you want discussed, including any concern about access or water collecting on the property. Ask what further assessment is needed rather than deciding on a particular solution in advance. If your ideas involve new paving or a change to planting, discuss how those choices relate to the surrounding space.

Discuss the whole project sequence

Ask which decisions belong in the initial proposal and which depend on later selections. If the work may happen in stages, request a description of what each stage includes and what will remain unfinished between visits. Confirm the arrangements you need to make before work begins, such as access and the protection of items you want to retain.

Plan the handoff

Before choosing a proposal, discuss the maintenance you are prepared to arrange after installation. Ask what instructions will accompany the work and which follow-up questions should go to the contractor. Review the proposal against your yard brief, checking that your main priorities have been addressed and that unresolved choices are identified.

Keep the next decision clear

Check the connections between this question and the rest of the yard brief. A change in one area may prompt another discussion, but it should not silently become an instruction to expand the scope.

Landscape project planning questions

What belongs in a landscape project brief?

Describe the area, its intended use, what you want to retain and the questions you want assessed.

How should proposals be compared?

Compare the work, preparation, selections and exclusions against the same brief before considering differences between totals.

What should inspiration photographs explain?

Label the particular arrangement or detail you like and discuss how that preference relates to the actual property.

How can unresolved choices be recorded?

Keep an explicit list of questions and identify what information is needed before each selection can be made.

What access questions should be discussed?

Describe entrances, gates and everyday routes, then ask which arrangements are relevant to the proposed work.

How should a staged project be discussed?

Ask what each stage includes, how the areas connect and the condition expected between stages.

How does maintenance fit into a design discussion?

Explain which care tasks you intend to arrange and ask what information accompanies the proposed work.

What should a revised proposal identify?

Record the affected area, the changed selection and which earlier assumptions still apply.

How can a lawn maintenance enquiry be clearer?

Name the lawn area and tasks under discussion, keeping observations separate from assumptions about their cause.

What should be kept at handoff?

Retain the current scope, agreed changes and care information, with outstanding questions identified separately.
