The Roanoke Valley is a great place to have a dog. Between the Roanoke River Greenway, the trails on Mill Mountain and the parks scattered across Salem and Roanoke County, there is no shortage of places to explore. The downside shows up at home: hair on the sofa, paw prints in the hallway and a fine layer of fur gathering under every piece of furniture. A regular cleaning service from The Happy Housekeepers helps pet owners keep up.

Living Well With Pets in the Roanoke Valley

Pet hair is persistent. It clings to carpets, drifts into corners and collects along baseboards. The company's standard residential routine includes vacuuming carpets, mopping hard-surface floors, dusting and polishing furniture and dusting window sills, baseboards, blinds and ceiling fans. For homes with shedding dogs or cats, those tasks done regularly make a noticeable difference to how the house looks and smells.

Frequency is the key. A monthly visit may not be enough in a home with two large dogs, while a weekly or bi-weekly plan keeps hair and dirt from building up between cleanings. Spring is often the worst time, when dogs shed their winter coats at the same time as pollen season hits the valley. Many pet owners in Cave Spring and Hollins increase their visits during those months and scale back later in the year.

Muddy paws are another challenge, especially after a rainy spell when Virginia red clay turns walks into a mess. Entryways, kitchen floors and mudrooms take the brunt of it. During your free estimate, you can ask for those areas to be prioritized, and the crew will give them extra attention every visit. If you have a particular product you want used on your floors because of your pets, staff will use it on request.

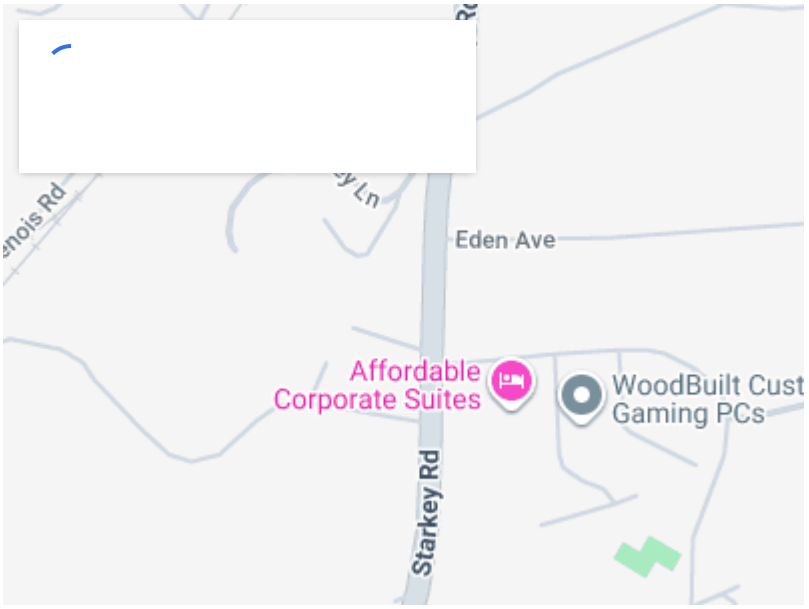

Pet owners often want to know how crews handle animals in the home. During the estimate, let the office know about your pets, including whether they should be kept in a particular room or left outside during the visit. Because employees are bonded and insured through the company, many clients are comfortable not being home, and clear instructions help each visit go smoothly.

The Happy Housekeepers has served Roanoke since 1979, is licensed, bonded and insured, and holds an A+ rating with Roanoke cleaning service the BBB, with accreditation dating back to 1993.
