Handing a child a phone or tablet is a bit like lending them a small glass sculpture Mobile Phone Repair Near Me and asking them to run around with it, so it is no surprise that cracked screens are one of the most common family repair jobs. The good news is that most damage caused by little hands is fixable, and it rarely makes sense to replace a whole device because of a smashed corner. If you have been searching for mobile phone repair near me after a tearful confession on the school run, here is a calm way to approach it.

Start with safety. A cracked screen can have sharp edges, so put a strip of clear tape or a screen protector over the damage to stop splinters catching small fingers, and take a look at where the cracks run before anyone swipes the phone again. If the back of the device looks swollen or bulging, or it feels hot, switch it off, stop charging it, and have it checked rather than carrying on. Never let children press on a cracked display to see how it feels, and keep the device away from younger siblings until the glass is dealt with.

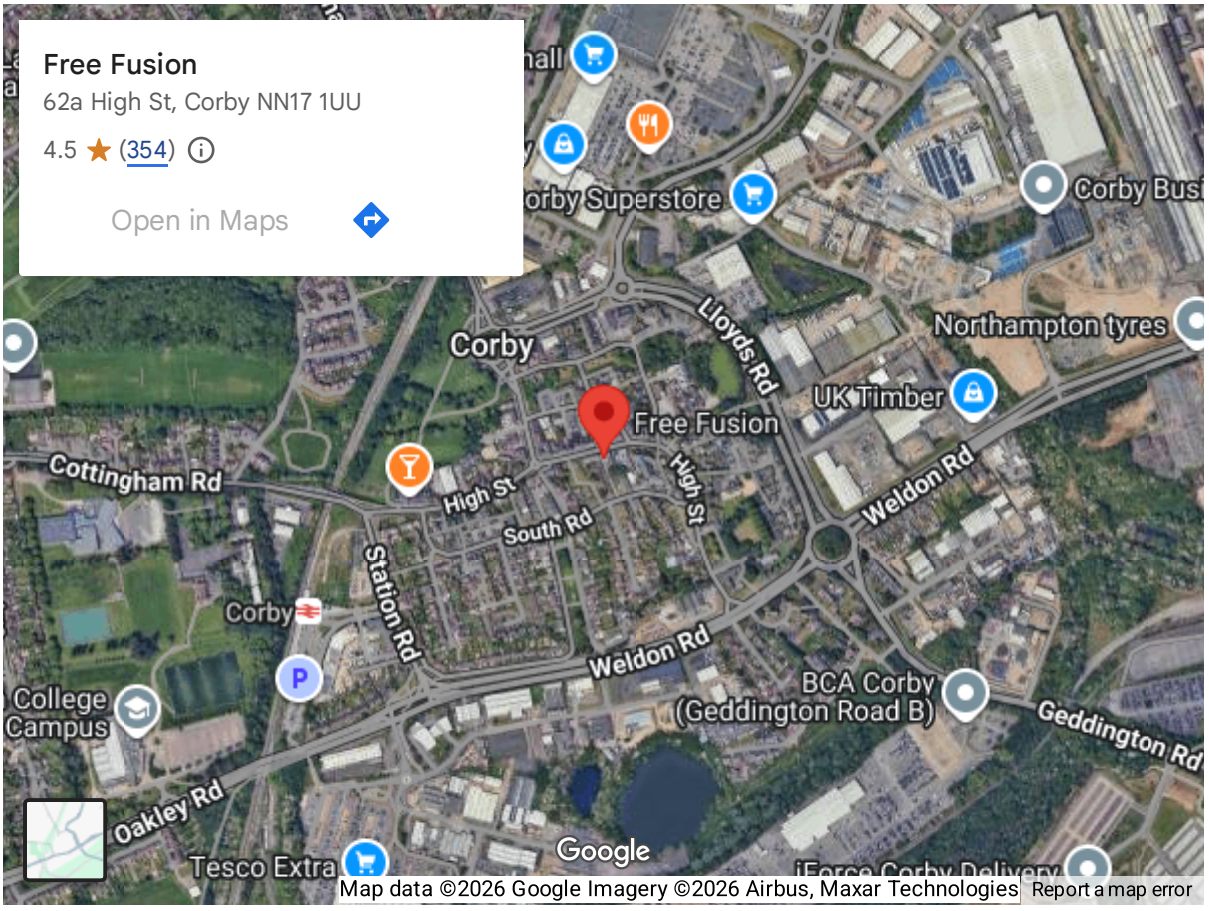

Next, protect the information. Photos of birthdays, school work and saved messages are the things parents regret losing, so back up before taking the device anywhere. On an iPhone or iPad that means iCloud or a computer backup, and on Android it means the Google backup in settings. Write down the passcode and make sure you know the Apple ID or Google account details, because you may need them for testing afterwards. If the screen is too damaged to use, a quick call can often work out the best route before you take it in.

On cost, it helps to know the numbers before you decide between repairing and replacing. At Free Fusion in Corby, iPhone screen replacements start from £24.99, iPad screen replacements start from £39.99 and iPhone battery replacements start from £19.99, and local customers get a free diagnosis so you can understand the problem before paying. If a drink has gone over a handset, switch it off, do not charge it, and bring it in quickly, as iPhone water damage work starts from £9.99. Most smartphone screen and battery replacements are completed within about an hour, and same-day service is available for most repairs.

A few simple habits prevent a repeat visit. A chunky case with a raised lip around the screen does more than almost anything else, and a tempered glass protector takes the first hit so the real screen does not. Agree a rule that phones stay on the sofa or table rather than being carried up and down the stairs, and charge them with the cable placed so it cannot be tugged. Families come to us from Weldon, Gretton, Stanion, Brigstock, Geddington and Rushton, and schools and businesses can ask about device repairs too. Ring 01536 260 558 or bring the device to 62a High St, Corby, open weekdays and Saturdays.
