Salem sits just west of Roanoke along the Roanoke River, with a mix of historic downtown homes, postwar neighborhoods, college rentals near Roanoke College and newer subdivisions climbing the surrounding hills. That variety means Salem homeowners see the full range of Southwest Virginia pests, and Perdue Exterminators has been pest control company Roanoke serving them for decades from its office on Old Cave Spring Road, a short drive across the valley.

Older homes near downtown Salem and along Main Street often have stone or block foundations, crawl spaces and wooden porches that give termites and carpenter ants easy access. Properties near the river and its tributaries deal with higher humidity, which supports camel crickets, cockroaches and mold. Hillside homes backing onto woods see more spiders, mice and stinging insects. Perdue's general pest control service covers all of these, along with termite, bed bug, ant, rodent, spider and cricket extermination.

Rental properties near the college see their own patterns. Student turnover brings bed bugs in secondhand furniture and luggage, and shared walls in older converted houses allow cockroaches to travel between units. Landlords in Salem benefit from a local company that can respond promptly, explain the problem clearly and treat effectively. Perdue's bed bug service starts with a free inspection and consultation.
